GREAT DEMAND THIS SPRING FOR TENEMENTS,

especially in south and easterly sections of the city, also nearly all houses built for homes the past year were built in this section of the city. I have lots on many desirable streets and mostly in eastern section of city, on Hill St., be had elsewhere. If you were to buy a cow you would usually see a party who had many for sale, rather than buy a man's only cow. Take a walk during the next day or two, visiting above streets. Notice they are our best streets and lots well elevated. No fear of surface water or flood.

Miss Jessie Walker was pleasantly surprised at her home on So. Main street on Friday evening by thirty of her young friends. Miss Mary Stephen presented her a beautiful ring. Refreshments were served and a pleasant evening was spent with games and songs, and James Greig delighted the company with a violin solo.

Elita Proctor Otis, who created the role of Mrs. Witherpoon Copley in "The Girl from Rector's," is said to be the highest priced comedienne on the American stage to-day. It is the boast of the actress that in her entire career she has never been identified with a failure. At Barre opera house Saturday, August 20.

Charles S. Currier of Winston-Salem, N. C., formerly a well-known resident of this city and city engineer, spent Sunday visiting relatives here, being on the way back to North Carolina, where he is engaged in superintending railroad construction. Mrs. Currier, who is at present in New Hampshire, will come to Barre later.

Probably the best list of horses seen in Vermont for years will take part in the races given by the Gentlemen's Driving club at the trotting park next Friday and Saturday. Eighteen horses are already at the track, and before Thursday night all of the stalls will be filled; and at the present writing it would not be surprising if some of them would have to be quartered down town. The full list of entries will be printed in to-morrow's paper.

That Mrs. Pantton, formerly of Barre, is meeting with great success in music teaching at her new home in Salida, Colorado, is indicated by the following clipping from a Colorado paper: "It is a matter for congratulation that so many of Salida's growing girls are talented musically, and no event is marked with greater interest than the musical recital given from time to time by the teachers who have these buds of promise in training. The one given by Mrs. Pantton Friday evening at the Presbyterian church was no exception to the rule, and attendance of parents and friends was large. The different numbers given by each student really deserved a special mention, but lack of space forbids that we give. We give below the numbers in order, stating that each pupil acquitted herself admirably and well." Then follows a program of twenty-six numbers.

At the Dreamland to-day: "The Mule Driver and the Garrulous Mute" (dramatic), by Rex Beach. In Bill Joyce, whom we have previously met in the successful film, "Partners," Mr. Beach has created one of those rough, rugged characters of western fiction, which will live long in the memory of readers of his stories of frontier life. In this picture we see Bill at two stages of his career, first as a young Texan mule driver. During an Apache raid in Flat Water canyon, New Mexico, he saves the life of a young girl, who is in charge of a small party of cavalry engaged in driving off a band of Apaches. The Indians have massacred a home seeker, John Martin, and his wife in the presence of their son, "Kink," a boy of fourteen. The impression made on the child's mind is so great that forever after the sight of an Indian produces in him the desire to kill.
